Description

The theme of the course has common precaution in all European countries: personal development, environmental protection, sustainable actions and behaviors for citizens and future generations, and citizenship responsibilities. These are the elements to be communicated and developed in all phases of education and integrated into the European education system.

The questioning of the different training programs offered by participants in Europe will ensure the best use of the conducted research. Our teachers will contribute to expanding training strategies on how to incorporate sustainable development elements in different types of formal education and to compare and disseminate good practices.

Participation in a European co-operation program offers the opportunity for our school to acquire knowledge and experience from other partners. The European dimension in the field of environment and sustainable development offers the opportunity to compare and develop on-the-ground collaboration and existing practices that are important for all EU countries.

Our pupils use natural materials to create ephemeral art in an outdoor setting. With bare hands and natural tools, they rearrange leaves, grass, stone, twigs, sand, ice, snow, mud, pine cones and other materials by using color, form, shape, pattern, light, and shadow in order to create art in simple contrast to surroundings. Then they take photographs of their art works with digital cameras. They will write poetry about their experience while creating the artworks and their feelings about nature. The artworks and the poetry will be collected in a memory book and the pupils in the countries involved in the project will send the books to each other. The project invites partner pupils to discover simple miracles of everyday life, the landscapes that surround us, insisting on the fragile relationship between people, nature, art and the passage of time. We discover miracles looking the beauties created by nature and have unique feelings when we look at the ants' walk or listen to the crickets' song. The miracle of the European friendship will wear the mark of our partnership. This project metaphorically tells us temporality of life as the art work created in nature. Research reveals an ancient and intimate connection between language and landscapes, a connection that is found in cultures around the world. Within each person there is a gifted orator, artist, listener and performer. Exploring the natural world becomes a way for people to develop these gifts and celebrate their use.
